"I must consult my diary."

Rapidly she turned the leaves, pausing now and then to scrutinize a page.

"I fear"—

Her face was sober with doubt. There was a tinge of regret in the mellifluous voice.
'Yes, I am sure. I must decline."
The suitor rested his russet shoe on the bis nose. 'Curse it," he observed.

"Curse it," he observed.

She sighed.

"No," she proceeded, thoughtfully.
"I cannot be yours. At least not this eve. I find upon consulting my dary that yesterday morning I became engaged to marry another. The option runs for forty-eight hours and it won't expire until to marrow."
